Today in the Ausseerland

Grimming

At 2,351 m, the Grimming is one of the most striking and impressive mountains in Styria. An isolated massif of Dachstein limestone, it rises between the Enns Valley and the Hinterberg Valley and was long considered the highest mountain in Styria.

Its imposing appearance, the varied but consistently challenging climbs and the spectacular view over the Ausseerland region make it a popular destination for experienced mountaineers.

Numerous legends surround the Grimming - the mysterious Grimmingtor is particularly well known and adds to its mystical aura.

On a clear day, the view from the summit extends far beyond the Enns Valley. Its unique location and wild beauty make the Grimming one of the most impressive mountains in the region.

Nikolaus-Lenau-Hill

Nikolaus Lenau (1802-1850), one of the most important poets of German Romanticism, found a source of inspiration in Ausseerland. The impressive landscape with its mountains, forests and lakes left a lasting impression on his nature poetry. A special place of his attachment is the so-called Lenau Hill in Bad Aussee, which was named after the poet. His letters and poems bear witness to his deep emotional relationship with the landscape of Ausseerland.
